AIR HERO NOW ANXIOUS TO USE HIS FAMED PLANE

May Fly To Capital Today
And Take Ship To New York

ATTENDS A LUNCHEON

Speaks To 3,700 People On Subject of Commercial Aviation

By James L. Kilgallen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, June 15.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh will not be himself until "we" are together again. Upon awakening today, the first thing he did was to take a look at the sky. He found it cloudless, and the sun shining brightly.

"Slim" at once began to ponder if the official program mapped out for him would give him time to fly to Washington and bring back the "Spirit of St. Louis," the other part of the famous "aeronautical we." He made no secret of how much he misses his beloved plane.

The report spread that Lindbergh planned to dash by motor to Mitchell Field this morning and from there fly to Washington. It is two hours to Washington by air and as long back, and he is scheduled to attend a luncheon at 12.30 this afternoon given by the Mercantile Association and the Chamber of Commerce.

If he does not fly this morning, he may make the trip this afternoon. He will not, however, fly at all if it means the breaking of any engagements.

His day is to be his own, except for the early afternoon luncheon. Tonight he appears at boxing bouts at the Polo Grounds, where he will see his old friend, Ace Hickins, Lincoln, Neb., "wildcat," in action. He will also attend part of a Ziegfeld Theatre performance and at midnight will attend the Nungesser-Coli benefit performance at the Roxy Theatre.

His mother, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, will bid New York farewell at five o'clock this afternoon. She will take a train for St. Louis, accompanied by members of that city's reception for Lindbergh committee. St. Louis plans a great reception for Lindbergh upon his arrival there after his hop off from New York Friday in the Spirit of St. Louis.

Colonel Lindbergh was the guest of honor last night at a banquet at the Hotel Commodore attended by 3,700 of New York's most prominent personalities. Lindbergh described his hop from New York to Paris, told about the tremendous reception he had received and, swinging to his favorite subject—commercial aviation—predicted a glowing future for America in the air, but warned that the necessary steps must be taken to assure the nation this supremacy.

An essential need just now, Lindbergh said, was the establishment of more and greater airports—closer to the centres of population. Trans-Atlantic air travel is still years distant, he said. A commercial air force, he added, is a nation's safeguard in the event of war.

WASHINGTON, June 15 (I.N.S.).—While Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's famous trans-Atlantic plane, "The Spirit of St. Louis," rested in a hangar at the naval air station today, awaiting its pilot, an acrimonious controversy broke out here today over who was to blame for the defective motor which prevented Lindbergh from flying the ship to New York.

Col. Wm. Mitchell, former stormy petrel of the Army Air Service, and admittedly one of the foremost flyers of the country, flatly charged that the faulty engine was due to "naval inefficiency."

RIVERSIDE THEATRE

Not since Charles Ray began his sensational comeback has he had a role that compared with Terry O'Neill in "The Fire Brigade," the great fire picture to be shown at the Riverside Theatre tonight for the last time. It was produced by Hunt Stromberg for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

As Terry O'Neill, Ray plays the part of a young man, just deciding to follow the vocation that his father and grandfather have both given up everything for. It takes him through his days as a recruit, then his actual experiences as a fireman, revealing his innermost feelings when first called into duty, and his subsequent heroism. Through the whole there is a charming love story.

GAME COMMISSION TO DECIDE DOE SHOOTING

Likely To Establish An Open
Season In Various State
Sections

FULL POWER TO DECIDE

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 15 (I.N.S.).—The State game commission at its meeting here July 7 hopes to decide the controversial question of the sections of the State where doe may be shot next fall, John B. Truman, the executive secretary said today.

Announcement of the commission's decision to establish an open season for does in certain sections started a flood of letters for and against the plan. Organizations of sportsmen as well as individual hunters have been swamping the offices here with their views on the subject.

The decision was prompted not only because of damage complaints coming from farmers in the deer country but also because of the possible disease which is said to sweep wild life when it becomes too numerous.

The commission has full power to decide just what counties or parts of them will have open shooting for female deer. Game wardens in all parts of the state have been furnishing the commission with estimates of deer in their district.

Individual sportsmen are protesting because of the rigid manner in which the law against shooting does has been enforced in recent years. To protect the does as well as the young bucks the commission twice changed the rule governing the shooting of male deer. The last provision was that bucks, to be legal game, must have not only six inch antlers but a visible prong or "Y." While a majority of the wardens used leniency in applying the rule, decisions of others frequently were protested. Each illegally killed buck or doe brought a $100 fine.

The commission will be faced with a delicate situation in that many farmers and sportsmen who own large tracts of land say that they will prohibit all hunting on their property if their sections are thrown open to doe hunting.

It is partly because of the commission's campaign against doe shooting that the average sportsman has come to classify such hunters with fish dynamiters and "game hogs."

BREAK INTO FACTORY; THROW ACID ON SHIRTS

Quakertown Company Suffers
Serious Damage To Stock

NO CLUE TO OFFENDERS

QUAKERTOWN, June 15.—Chief of Police Rhoads has sought the aid of the State Police to investigate a criminal case that has resulted in throwing over 100 people out of employment in this borough.

When the factory of the Fishman Shirt Company was opened Monday morning it was discovered that large quantities of some powerful acid had been poured over a large number of shirts valued at $3,000. The acid ruined the new shirts.

Bottles containing the acid, a black fluid, were found in various parts of the factory. Entrance was gained to the factory through a window and the acid poured on the shirts some time during the night.

Chief Rhoads directed that the employees be sent home and that the shirts and poison bottles be not disturbed until the State Police from Doylestown arrived in the afternoon.

Chief Rhoads stated that the factory, so far as he knew, is having no labor troubles at the present time. The employees have been working steadily.

In some quarters it is believed that the outrage was not committed by any local persons, but Hyman Fishman, head of the company, refused to make any comments or to voice any suspicions.

This, however, is not the first mysterious misfortune the firm has suffered.

Last Spring the plant was set afire in some undiscovered manner and a great deal of damage was done by water and smoke, but not a great deal by fire, owing to the prompt action of the fire companies. Work at the factory was held up for some time as a result. The mystery has never been satisfactorily cleared up.

"The persons who committed this last outrage," said a man who visited the factory this morning, "went about it in a very businesslike way. Two huge bottles of the acid were used. Evidently the miscreant first paid attention to the finished product, going about the job in a systematic way after forcing an entrance by breaking a window. Then attention seems to have been turned to the machines where material was going through the process of manufacture."

"Apparently the criminals ran out of acid for two long tables of material were untouched."

Locally, it is said, there has been no trouble for the firm which has been operating a plant here for a number of years.

Flag Day Exercises Held By Elks' Lodge Here

Comparing the motto of the Boys Scouts and those things for which the flag of the United States stands with the qualities of manhood and the courage that made Captain Lindbergh's recent feat possible, the Rev. Frederick A. Warden, of Ridley Park, gave a most inspiring patriotic address here last night.

The occasion was the flag day exercises held by the Bristol Lodge No. 970, B. P. O. E., in the social session room of the Elks' home.

The exercises were held in accordance with the ritual of the Elks' Lodge, with Exalted Ruler, Leon W. Sleifer, presiding. A few of the members of the order participated as well as the officers.

Sixty members of Boy Scout troops were present, and a goodly number of the townspeople.

Following music, dispensed by the orchestra of the Robert W. Bracken Post No. 352, American Legion, the assemblage voiced well their appreciation of Rev. Warden's speech on "The American Flag."

At the conclusion of the program, refreshments of ice cream and cake served.

BRISTOL MAN LOSES SUIT AGAINST AUTO CO.

Action Brought By Thomas
Collins Declared Involuntary Non-Suit

NEGLIGENCE UNPROVEN

Judge William C. Ryan, presiding in Court Room No. 2, at Doylestown, yesterday, declared an involuntary non-suit in the case of Thomas Collins, 54, Bristol, against Joseph Episcopo and E. Paul Vansant, trading as the Keystone Motor Sales Co.

The suit for damages grew out of an automobile accident on Pond street, Bristol, on July 22, 1925, when Collins was struck by the Episcopo automobile, sustaining a fractured right leg that confined him to the Harriman Hospital for ten weeks.

Failure to show any negligence on the part of the defendant resulted in the involuntary non-suit. The plaintiff was represented by Thomas Ross, of Doylestown, and the defendant by John L. Kilcoyne, of Bristol.

Trial started in Court Room No. 1 in the case of Mrs. Lucy S. Barndt, of Quakertown, against Furman Kline, of Quakertown. It is a damage suit growing out of an automobile collision on the Bethlehem pike in August, 1925.

Harry Grim, of Perkasie, represents the plaintiffs and C. William Freed, of Quakertown, the defendant. Judge Shull will hear the case.

A jury was also drawn and sent to Court Room No. 2, before Judge Ryan in the case of The L. K. Thread Company against Samuel Greenburg and Granville Hollenbach, co-partners, trading as Greenburg & Hollenbach (assumpsit).

DECLARE MISTRIAL IN X-RAY CASE FROM PERKASIE

Technicalities Arose at Hearing of Case Yesterday at Court

Argument Takes Place by The Counsel for Both Sides

DOYLESTOWN, June 15.—Technicalities that arose yesterday at the opening of the second day of the trial of Dr. Otto H. Strouse, Perkasie physician, who is being sued by Mrs. Anna H. Frederick and her husband, Horace B. Frederick, for injuries alleged to have been sustained as a result of X-ray treatments administered to her brought the case abruptly to an end for the time being.

Judge Samuel E. Shull, Stroudsburg, specially presiding, declared a mistrial, directed that a juror be withdrawn and the case continued. This action came following an argument between counsel on both sides and Judge Shull involving certain technicalities. The defense attorneys, Howard I. James, of Bristol, and Mark Thatcher, Perkasie, argued that the time of the offenses averred in the statement of claim was varied by two weeks beyond the time Mrs. Frederick testified to while on the stand yesterday. Harry E. Grim, of Perkasie, represented the plaintiffs.

In the suit for damages brought by Mrs. Frederick and her husband against Dr. Strouse, Mrs. Frederick testified that Dr. Strouse, after he had administered six X-ray treatments for the cure of a tumor affliction, admitted that he had forgotten to place one of the "filters" in the X-ray machine, resulting in a "body burn."

Mrs. Frederick was the only witness called in the case yesterday. Court adjourned at noon until this morning when it reconvened before Judge Shull. A large number of X-ray experts have been called by both sides to testify in the case.

The plaintiff yesterday showed her injuries to the jury.

She is suffering from a severe affliction, caused she alleges, by the "burn" of an X-ray machine, operated by Dr. Strouse.

In August, 1923, Mrs. Frederick went to Dr. Strouse's office and was advised that her affliction could be cured by either "the knife or X-ray." She finally decided upon the X-ray treatments after being told by Dr. Strouse, she says, that if she were a member of his family he would advise her not to go to the hospital, but to take the X-ray treatments.

"After the sixth treatment of the eight I took," testified Mrs. Frederick, "a burn showed on my body. In that condition two other treatments were given to me. Dr. Strouse admitted that time that he had forgotten to place the 'filter' in the machine that keeps out the dangerous rays that cause a burn."

Mrs. Frederick was confined to bed for two years and is still suffering from the injuries, it was testified.

Huntingdon Family Claims School Attendance Record

HUNTINGDON, Pa., June 15 (I.N.S.).—Huntingdon steps forward to claim for one of its families a State, if not a national record for school attendance.

The family, that of Marshall Showalter, consists of nine children—the eldest recently married and the youngest not yet of school age.

The eldest, Thelma, went through the grade school, the high school and the J. C. Blair Memorial Hospital Nurses' training school without missing a day's attendance in thirteen years, and never having been tardy. She has since become Mrs. Robert S. Jacobs.

The next in line is Harvey, now a sophomore in Juniata College. Harvey went through the grade school and high school in twelve years, without a single absence or tardiness being chalked up against him.

Jean was graduated from the high school this June, with never an absence or tardiness in thirteen years. Virginia is next, having completed her freshman year at the high school, without a single absence or tardy mark against her since her second grade. Elizabeth is in the sixth grade, and has never missed a day. Marshall, Jr., in the fifth grade, with never an absence or tardiness mark against him, and Chaucer is in the third grade, proudly bearing his part of the family record, with a clean slate to date.

Robert and Frederick, the babies of the family, look forward to their school days, the family being confident that they, too, will contribute to the family record.

TO SPEND SUMMER HERE

Rev. and Mrs. Johnson Hubbell, of Philadelphia, arrived today to take possession of Miss Julia Slack's home for the summer. Their many friends hope they will have an enjoyable summer.

Needlework Guild Raises Sum At A Card Party

A card party was held in the Community House, Monday afternoon, for the benefit of the Needlework Guild. The party was given under the direction of the chairman of the prize committee, Mrs. Edward Renk.

There were five tables of "500" formed, and eight games played. Seventeen prizes were awarded to those who had high scores. Mrs. B. F. McGee winning first prize with a high score of 3380. Mrs. L. Dries followed with a score of 3000.

Mrs. J. W. Wichser, 2930; Mrs. G. L. Williams, 2820; Mrs. Fred Decker, 2570; Mrs. Chester Beaton, 2520; Mrs. Samuel Black, 2470; Mrs. A. Rose, 2440; Mrs. Jensentius, 2420; Mrs. A. Popkin, 2410; Mrs. M. J. Hill, 2400; Miss Esther Lawrence, 2290; Mrs. R. Pearson, 1920; Mrs. H. Pope, 1920; Mrs. A. Burke, 1850; Mrs. H. Straus, 1630; Mrs. L. Hunter, 1620.

The Guild and the committees in charge wish to thank Mr. J. R. Grundy for the use of the Community House, which he so generously offered, and expresses its appreciation to the public in general for their help at all times. About $17 was realized at this party.

MRS. NAPOLI TAKEN TO STATE ASYLUM

Commission Named by Court
Declares Her To Be Insane

ATTACKED BROTHER

DOYLESTOWN, June 15.—Dr. Herbert T. Crough and Dr. John A. Fell, appointed by the Court to inquire into the sanity of Mrs. Bartholo Napoli, Bristol, whose two-year-old daughter was fatally burned last Wednesday, found her mentally deranged and she was taken to the State Hospital at Norristown.

Following the burning of her child, Mrs. Napoli refused to tell how the fatal accident occurred. Her actions at the time of the death of her daughter were so strange that she was suspected of being deranged. While at her home last Wednesday, Mrs. Napoli was seen rushing from her house with the burning child in her arms. The little victim was taken to a hospital, where she died a few hours later.

Upon being questioned regarding the fatality, Mrs. Napoli refused to make any statement.

A further indication of her deranged condition was brought to light Saturday night, when she is alleged to have attempted to choke her sister-in-law, Mrs. Francis Lupineo, Bristol, and when her brother remonstrated with her, she attacked him also. Following this she broke loose from their custody, jumped through a window at the Lupineo home, jumped from a rear porch, climbed over a fence and attempted to jump into the Adams Hollow Creek.

Famous "Broadway Limited" Ends Quarter Of A Century

The "Broadway Limited," the Pennsylvania Railroad's deluxe 29-hour express between New York, Philadelphia and Chicago, completes a quarter century of service today. This world-famous train began to run on June 15, 1902, inaugurating the fastest regular long distance passenger train service in history.

In honor of its "silver" anniversary, the "Broadway Limited" leaving New York and Chicago today will carry in its dining cars mammoth birthday cakes with twenty-five candles. A special dinner will be served, including a piece of birthday cake for each passenger in the dining cars. Special souvenir menus, engraved in silver and decorated with a hand colored picture of the train will also be distributed.

At the time of its inception, the "Broadway" was known as the "Pennsylvania Special." In November, 1912, however, the name was changed and the present designation adopted. The name, "Broadway Limited," not only commemorates New York City's famous thoroughfare but typifies the "broad-way" of transportation and commerce represented by the Pennsylvania Railroad's main line between New York, Philadelphia and Chicago.

The "Broadway Limited" maintains an average speed of 45.4 miles per hour including stops on its trip of 908 miles, between the three largest cities on the American continent. After leaving Manhattan Transfer where a steam locomotive is substituted for the electric engine used in the New York tunnels, the "Broadway" makes only four stops for passengers before arriving at Chicago. They are at Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Pittsburgh and Fort Wayne, Ind. Eastbound, the same stops are made.

With the miles rolling under its wheels at the rate of nearly 2,000 a day, the "Broadway" has made since its inauguration 25 years ago more than 14,000 trips, totaling approximately 13,000,000 miles—the equivalent of more than 500 journeys around the world.

—Mrs. Philip Callahan, of Camden, N. J., was a guest over the week-end of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Dugan, of Pine street.

CLASS NIGHT WILL BE HELD HERE IN H. S. AUDITORIUM

Graduates of 1927 to Frolic
Tomorrow Evening In Annual Event

A PLEASING PROGRAM

Wit and Humor Will Feature
The Program of The Evening

With the completion of their studies at the Bristol High School the members of the Class of 1927 have bent their efforts on plans and preparations for the Class Day exercises, which will take place in the high school auditorium tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock.

This will be an evening of fun, with plenty of wit and humor directed at the various members of the graduating class. Musical numbers will be furnished by the high school orchestra, and class song, which was written and for which the music was composed by Mildred I. Bell, will be given.

Following the president's welcome, Miss Mary Wurster will give the class history, this being well outlined in every respect, and dealing with the accomplishments of the class as a whole from the time of the entrance into high school.

A vocal solo will be rendered by Miss Edith Berkey; followed by the class prophecy (1937) by Miss Ruth Schweikert. The latter has as its setting various countries in Europe, and the occupations, activities, and accomplishments of the present class are put forth in a most humorous manner.

The class poem, written by Mildred I. Bell, will be given by Charles Boyd; with the Last Will and Testament of '27's members by Cora Bazzel. Two acts will be presented as a class reunion on board the S. S. Bristoliana in 1932, is given. The first act will be during one afternoon, while the time of the second act is the evening of the same day.

Prizes will likewise be awarded during the evening's program, for meritorious work during the school term.

The class song, words and music of which were written by Miss Mildred I. Bell, is here given:

While treading the paths which thou learned have trod,
May we never fail to keep this in mind—
That our future will be as we start
it now,
And 'twill pay us to build up the better kind.

Each one has himself to make good in the world,
And each his part in this life's great race.

Therefore, we, as the members of Twenty-Seven,
Are pledged by our motto to win a place.

Visit Relatives Here After Tour From Florida

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Stauffer, and children, of Tampa Shores, Florida, arrived at the home of Mrs. Stauffer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Roper, of Maple Beach. The trip was made by automobile in four days.

Mrs. Stauffer is well known in town. She was organist in the Methodist Church a number of years, and had a large class of students in the study of music. Mr. Stauffer was in the newspaper business while living here. During their stay in the North they will visit many of their relatives and friends in different cities. At the present time, Mr. and Mrs. Stauffer and family are in Boyertown, Pa.

HE HAS TACT

Captain Lindbergh's decision to cut short his European visit was wisely taken. A good time to leave hospitable shores is when enthusiasm and welcome show no sign of abating. There is a limit to human capacity to maintain the fever of exaltation which has greeted Lindbergh and he exercises good judgment in not awaiting its subsidence—a possible anticlimax to a historic event as yet unmarred by a single untoward incident.

A flight which at first was viewed chiefly as an adventure has turned out to be something far greater, and his countrymen have been profoundly touched as well as gratified by seeing an American boy amaze and win the world as much by his manliness and his splendid bearing under a most trying ordeal as by his great exploit.

This youthful aviator seems almost too good to be true. In his refusal to capitalize many opportunities for large financial gains by questionable though customary methods, he has shown possession of ideals which make his competitors the more proud of him. He is America's best answer to Europe's charge of materialism.

There are not many Americans who would have dared attempt Lindbergh's lonely and hazardous flight, but one suspects that the majority of that number, had they made it, would capitalize on it to the limit.

A SERMON ON TOWN LOYALTY

No citizen is so powerful, none so humble, but what his town is an aid to him in some way or other. There is where he employs his labor or his capital, builds his home, enjoys the society of his kind and, in short, finds everything that makes life worth the living. Failing to find these things he usually goes in search of them elsewhere. If he remains it is natural to suppose he has found that which he sought.

Since your town boosts you why not do as well by it as it does by you? To progress it needs the help of every citizen, and every citizen benefits individually from every community improvement, whether that improvement take the form of public works, population growth, increased prosperity or business development.

No community is so miserable and unattractive that it has not its boosters and none so perfect that it has not its knockers, but that city or town achieves most in civic betterment which has the most boosters.

There are boosters and many of them in Bristol. They and their forerunners have made it the fine community it is and are making it the better community all want it to be in the future. But there are two reasons why every citizen should be a civic worker and booster. First, it is unfair to place the whole burden upon the few and, second, every citizen owes it himself and his fellow citizens to do everything within his power to make the community better that it may the better serve all.

However, one should not make the mistake of confining his boosting to talking about the virtues of his home town. Direct advertising pays, but the kind of boosting that pays the highest dividends is sober and persevering endeavor of the kind that builds and beautifies the community.

Petting parties are not new. Cleopatra was one.

Croydon

Some interesting business was discussed at the monthly meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Croydon Fire Company on Friday evening. The company they had built to the present fire house is now completed, and this month will be completely paid for. The firemen have volunteered to give it a coat of paint.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lewis, of River Road, entertained Miss Mildred Graham, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Samuel Mayberry, of Merchantville, N. J., on Wednesday evening.

Through the wonderful work of the Ladies' Aid of the Lutheran Church, State road and Excelsior avenue, conditions are quite improved. The ground surrounding the church was purchased through their help, and they now have a new electric stove which will be quite an assistance to them. On Saturday evening, June 25th, they are giving a supper, ice cream and cake at the church, and feel sure it will be a successful affair. Do not forget the date.

Matinee Ladies

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"MATINEE LADIES," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picture production of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Bob Ward, college student, works as a dancing partner for rich women in a New Jersey roadhouse. There he meets the prettiest, sweetest girl he has ever laid eyes on—Sally, the cigarette girl. Reciprocating his interest, she warns him against the mysterious and beautiful Mrs. Hammond, habitué of the inn, who finds her "thrill" in "hunting" Bob for her loveliest apartment. Mrs. Hammond tells Bob she is an authoress, secretly in search of color; and offers him the free use of her studio, apparently with innocent motives.

Bob was quite overcome by the munificence of Mrs. Hammond's offer. It was, in fact, too munificent.
"How could I ever save up enough to pay you back, Della? Why, it must cost you a small fortune to maintain that apartment."
"Oh, we'll pro rate the cost, on some fair basis. After all, it's my workroom. It's merely being loaned to you. And the cost isn't so awfully much. There's only a bedroom, bath, living room, dinette and kitchenette. Your meals will be served by the maid, brought up from a central kitchen. What do you say, Bob? Like to run over now and have a look at it?"
Bob hesitated a long, long minute. He felt Mrs. Hammond's eyes studying him, and after their conversation he was ashamed to appear string might, under the lashing of a passionate storm.

Yet, her eternally inscrutable smile masked the sting of her defeat. Of Victory suddenly turned to defeat!

CHAPTER XIV
Meanwhile, the skeins of the elaborate net that Mrs. Hammond was weaving around Bob, had reached into the gentle life of Sally Smith, and were tangling her combed-honey hair, her slender legs, all unbeknownst to her. For Sally was such a precious little goosling, and Mrs. Hammond and Madame Leonine and Mazie Revere were such ravenous hawks!

In her implacable hunt to win the physical love of Bob Ward, Mrs. Hammond had recognized that the bond of affection and attachment growing up so swiftly between Bob and little Sally Smith was going to prove an insurmountable barrier, presently, unless she quickly found a way to breach it. Having at her disposal the influence, the wealth, the time to prepare exhaustive plans and to secure the best aid, she had reached right down into little Sally's private life and personal affairs.

In ways best known to herself, she had investigated enough to know the conditions of Sally's home, and to learn about Tom Mannion. Again, in ways best known to herself, but more apparent, she seemed to it that Tom Mannion became known to Mazie Revere.

Enlisting the aid of Madame Leonine and Mazie Revere, who of course had their own reasons for pandering to every little whim of Mrs. Hammond's, the wealthy huntress of men inserted the barbed tip of her first wedge between Sally and Bob.

The event of the afternoon, in which Madame Leonine had despatched Sally to Mazie Revere's with a message, was the beginning.

Sally had gone without delay to Mazie's home, in the mid-fifties on the east side of Madison Avenue, and had primly delivered her message—an innocuous verbal communication.

Mazie, affecting a grown-up concern in Sally, had cordially invited her in to rest. Sally protested at first, because she was anxious to get home and dispose of her evening chores early, so that she could get a good night's sleep and be fresh and bright for the picnic with Bob on the morrow.

Mazie won her over to a brief visit by offering to show her through the apartment. Woman-like, Sally was anxious to see the place. She knew that Mazie had a lot of money, and that she coined it from many and diverse gentlemen friends in the process commonly known around the Palisado Inn as "gold-digging."

Sally, however, was hardly prepared for the revelation of ornate grandeur that followed. The place was simply palatial—in little Sally Smith's eyes, trained, as they were, to the modest things of a pinched home. Endless corridors and rooms, a roof garden, gorgeous draperies, it was just like Sally had seen in vampire moving pictures. She was not thrilled half so much as overwhelmed.

But if femininity curiously had been responsible for Sally's brief stay, something more tangible and startling gave her further pause.

When they had sat down for a minute in the great living room, before the open hearth, where Mazie insisted upon installing Sally in the biggest and softest chair, Mazie propped herself on the arm beside her, put a friendly hand on Sally's slim shoulder and smiled.

"You know, Sally Smith, I'm awfully fond of you, even though I get a bit impatient with you at times because you pass up opportunities that I'd grab in a minute. Not that I don't admire you for your gumption, of course, kid, for I do. But that ain't what I want to talk about. The fact is, dearie, I've a surprise for you—"

Sally looked up, utterly bewildered.

"Yes," smiled Mazie, "I know you'll be pleased. I'm going to throw a house party here tonight, and I want you to come as my special guest."

"Oh," gasped Sally, which meant neither yes nor no, nor anything; and Mazie gave her no chance to recover and become definite, but continued, talking rapidly and in-gratingly.

"Fact is, too, honey, that I know how shy you are, and so that you won't feel alone and strange with so many new faces, I've asked a friend of yours to come along, to escort you. Tom Mannion!"

"Mr. Mannion! Mazie, how in the world did you get to know Tom Mannion, or that he knew me?"

Mazie chuckled. "Oh, don't worry now about his morals, dearie. He ain't one of the kind that I or my girl friends play for a sucker. Tom's all right. He's a nice clean fellow, with a mighty big future ahead of him in this man's burg."

BUY IN BRISTOL!

A DOLLAR SPENT IN BRISTOL IS WORTH TWO SPENT ELSEWHERE BECAUSE IT IS REINVESTED BY LOCAL PEOPLE IN LOCAL ENTERPRISES AND HELPS TO PAY FOR LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS

Did you ever really give the subject of the local merchant and you any serious thought?

Perhaps you are a loyal citizen and patronize local shops and stores as a matter of loyalty, but as this is not a lecture it will do no harm to read this, anyhow.

Your local merchant is first a citizen, a resident of your community the same as you are.

He lives in your community, pays taxes along with you for the upkeep and improvement of your community; he raises his family and sends his children to school—schools which he helps, with you, to maintain.

If he is a butcher, he buys clothes and shoes for his family from a fellow-merchant. No matter what his line of business, he spends money with other business men of the community.

He banks in local banks; he takes his family of an evening to the local shows.

Summed up, the money he makes in the community is spent in it.

Were it not for your local merchant, there would be no schools, no paved streets, no public buildings, no progress nor prosperity. He is here day in and day out, rain or shine, giving his time and energy and money to whatever will benefit the district, taking part in the administrations of the community or aiding to regulate the administration for the best interests of the community by his vote.

HE IS A CITIZEN—

Is he not entitled, then, to consideration?

But there is something more than a call for your loyalty to him as citizen to citizen—neighbor to neighbor.

Living here as he does, he comes to know his customers. They are to him not "just customers," but "fellow citizens," "good neighbors." As he will be here tomorrow and the next day and next year, meeting his customers face to face, day after day, his business gets his personal attention—every transaction is a personal dealing between him and the patron.

He is your neighbor—your fellow citizen, building for tomorrow and next year, and fully cognizant that the only way to build is to sell good goods at right prices.

Your local merchant is in himself a guarantee of his goods and prices and services because he is always at the same stand meeting largely the same customers.

He cannot exist upon the patronage of transients—his livelihood comes from permanent residents; his aim is to make permanent residents regular customers. He must do this—hence his wares, his prices and his service are all and always arranged and held to this end.

You never heard your live-wire, wide-awake home merchant say, "Oh, well, one customer more or less makes no difference." Every customer, to him, is important; a new customer is eagerly sought, and a customer less—well, your local merchant will not let it happen if anything just and reasonable under the sun will prevent such a thing happening.

So not alone out of a sense of loyalty to your community, but for your own sake—for the sake of your purse and the satisfaction of being given personal attention and service—buy of our home merchants.

KEYSTONE BASEBALL IX TROUNCES THE HIBS

The Keystone gave the Hibs a fine trouncing with McCarry bearing the brunt of the attack. McCarry held them hitless and scoreless until the last inning. Jones and Roe lead at the bat while McCarry took a walk each time up. The fielding of both teams was good. Nevegold again showed his ability as an umpire with Dan McDevitt assisting him on the bases.

Flood Relief Dictator Veteran in Relief Work

HENRY M. BAKER

HENRY M. BAKER, American Red Cross national director of disaster relief, is in complete charge of relief operations in the flooded Mississippi River Valley, exercising all the powers of a general during war.

Assisted by liaison officers of the United States Navy, Army, Veterans' Bureau, Coast Guard and other branches of the government and backed by a special Cabinet Committee appointed by President Coolidge, Mr. Baker from the relief headquarters at Memphis is directing the movement of flood refugees to safe territory, housing them in tent cities and seeing that they receive food, clothing and medical care.

Mr. Baker has had more experience in disaster relief work than anyone in the United States and is recognized as an authority abroad. His methods are constantly being studied by other countries and a former member of his staff is now in Paris helping the League of Red Cross Societies devise a disaster relief system.

Since he came to the Red Cross in 1919, as a worker in the former Southwestern Division, Mr. Baker has personally directed relief operations in more than 140 disaster-stricken communities and has administered a total relief fund in excess of $10,000,000. Mr. Baker became national director of disaster relief in 1922, at the age of 39.

When Mr. Baker came to the Red Cross, disaster work meant little more than giving emergency aid to sufferers in tornadoes, hurricanes, fires, floods and other calamities. The new director rapidly developed the system, co-ordinating Red Cross work with the government, developing a service that makes it possible to muster emergency service at a moment's notice through committees in all communities, building up disaster committees in chapters everywhere and enlarging operations of the service.

Often spectacular, operations have included such astounding feats as lassoing houses, swept from their moorings by floods, and towing them back by motor-boats; replanting acres of valuable orchards that have been uprooted by storms, rescuing live stock and assisting farmers to get their crops planted. The airplane is playing a role of increasing importance in relief work, both for reconnoitering and transporting supplies.

Mr. Baker was educated in Australia and worked his own way through the university. Later he did post-graduate work in social economy at the University of Missouri and at the St. Louis School of Social Economy. He is the author of the only disaster relief manual ever compiled, revised by the Red Cross this year and re-distributed to its 2,500 chapters as a handbook for use in organizations for disasters.
